Chronograph movement SZ05

Such an "Eintracht watch" for the 125th anniversary naturally requires the appropriate technical equipment, which can be seen in the SZ05 chronograph movement. With this in-house design, we focus on placing the stopwatch minute display with a 60-minute division at 3 o'clock and the running seconds at 9 o'clock. The advantage: there is no need to add up the stop minutes with the usual 30-minute division.

The ideal companion

The 60-minute counter circle at 3 o'clock deserves special attention anyway, as we have created an analogy to the club's most popular sport with this complication: The 45-minute period of the counter circle is marked in glossy black, so that the spectator in the stadium can immediately see the half-time of a soccer match to be played. As an easily recognizable contrast, we have designed the stop minute hand and the stop second hand in shiny red. Overall, this color arrangement reflects the club colors red, black and white as discreetly as it does tastefully. In addition, the numerals in the interior bezel as well as the hour and minute hands are luminescent, making it easy to read the time even in the dark. The special edition 910 Eintracht is low pressure resistant, water-resistant and pressure-resistant up to 10 bar. This makes it the ideal companion - whenever and wherever Eintracht Frankfurt inspires sports enthusiasts with passion and dedication.

EINTRACHT FRANKFURT COMMENTARY ON THE JOINT PROJECT

Sinn Spezialuhren and Eintracht Frankfurt

Eintracht and Sinn Spezialuhren created the first Eintracht watch in 2010, called 'Sinn 956 Adler'. "At least in terms of watches, Eintracht are already playing in the Champions League with the Sinn 956 Adler," said Managing Director Lothar Schmidt at the time. Since then, the Eagles have also played in the Champions League in real life. Soon the time came, for a new Adler watch, and not just to mark the club's 125th anniversary. Here are three reasons:

Watchmaker among Eintracht's founders

On 8 March 1899, the 'Frankfurter Fußball-Club Victoria', a predecessor club to Eintracht, was founded not far from Frankfurt's main train station, in what is now Düsseldorf Straße. Albert Pohlenk was appointed the first chairman in the truest sense of the word. Pohlenk was a watchmaker and ran a watch store at Eckenheimer Landstraße 57, where today there is a jewellery gallery.

Gifts from Real Madrid in 1960

Arguably the biggest game in Eintracht's history was the 1960 European Cup final against Real Madrid. In a hard-fought encounter, the Spaniards - spearheaded by superstars Alfredo Di Stéfano and Ferenc Puskás - won 7-3. Real had been in a more generous mood prior to kick-off, giving each Eintracht player a valuable Swiss wristwatch. If the club's officials did that before every final they would have been kept busy; the 1960 triumph was a fifth successive European Cup success for Spain's record national champions.

Eintracht like a watch movement

It is extremely rare for a watch manufacturer and a football club to come from the same city. In terms of passion, emotion and tradition, Eintracht have always been as reliable as a watch movement - and have been for 125 years now.
